Putting on a clinic

Colin Rogers, 9, of Attleboro, receives his COVID-19 vaccine from Anna Peterson, a nurse vaccine coordinator at Manet Community Health Center, during a clinic at Attleboro High School on Saturday.

More than 150 kids vaccinated at Attleboro High School event

BY JEREE COSENTINO FOR THE SUN CHRONICLE

With a little regulation for safety and oversight on the part of all, more than 150 Attleboro-area school children rolled up their sleeves for their coronavirus vaccine during Saturday's walk-in clinic at Attleboro High School.

Lucas Rogan, Deborah Elbert, who is the nurse coordinator for the city's public schools, and Sandra McGunagle, the director of marketing and communications for Manet.

Shortly past 9 a.m., when the clinic had opened in the high school's main entrance area, a steady flow of first graders had already been in and out, with others waiting in a designated area far to one side after receiving their shot to make about receiving their shot.

ANOTHER GREAT CROWD was on hand for the 88th annual Quince Christmas Parade Nov. 28. Here healthcare workers and volunteers from Manet Community Health Center and the Quincy Health Department wave to parade goers. They were honored as the parade's grand marshal for all their work and service during the pandemic. The Grand Marshal Float won the George White Award for Best Quincy Commercial Float. More parade photos on Page 18 and Page 19.
